By Envy's Frowns unaw'd, uncheck'd by Pride,
Still steadily I tread my wonted Way;

Mine is the Poet's Task, and thine the Song.

Avert ye sacred Pow'rs, and keep afar
From your Britannia's devoted Head,
The baleful Influence of malignant Star,
Nor be its direful Vengeance ever shed
Where Heav'n-born Liberty her Right maintains,
And royal GEORGE our gracious Sovereign reigns.

Who from the Tyranny, and Scourge of Days
Inglorious, to set at Liberty
Their future Offspring, bravely made a Stand,
And banish'd Vassalage out of the Land:—

For this, O Sires, ye great and glorious Band,
L'ght lie the Turf on each devoted Head;

Disturb the peaceful Mansions of the Dead:
And hourly, while through Life our Vessels steer,
Let Memory your sacred Names revere.

May hath XXXI Days.

Ah! what our Anceſtors ſo bravely won,
Dearer than Life, be e'er before our Eyes;
May we purſue the Paths that they have run,
And bravely keep, or fall a Sacrifice:
He who for Liberty reſigns his Breath,
Has conquer'd more than Man; he conquers Death.

The conjunction too of ☉ with 4 methinks ſeems to ſmile upon Church and State, & apparently portend the defence of both Eccleſiaſtical and Regal authority, but as nothing is permanent in this ſublunary ſcene, ſo the ſunſhine of our hopes is clouded by the malign ſquare of ☉ and ♄; this may ſomewhat abate thoſe influences, much to be wiſhed for, yet if, as I think it will be, other nations will experience the baleful effects more than we, let us ſet our hearts at reſt.

JUNE hath xxx. Days.

No more the tyrant's Curfew's dismal sound,
The Peasant calls to darkness and to bed;
Ceas'd are those days; and joyful see around
The blazing hearth beneath each lowly shed.
While comfort, peace, and love the bosom fires,
With all the joy that liberty inspires.

Saturn too, who is but ſurly at the beſt, and is employed in them both, is retrogade; poſſibly the enemies of peace may be at work to oppoſe theſe happy influences which more benign aſpects ſeem to promiſe. Mars, who is never backward at a quarrel, appears by his poſition with ♄ to be inclined to aſſiſt him. I think this will be a buſy year; and the Tartars, Muſcovy, Arabia, &c. will either feel the effects themſelves, or cauſe others to feel them. The concluſion of which, time muſt determine. All I ſhall obſerve is, that the lot is caſt into the lap; but the diſpoſal thereof is from the Lord.

Flee baneful ignorance this happy isle,

See learning comes with ever graceful smile,
And here the Muses fix their happy seat.
Ignorance saw, and shook his stupid head;
And superstition with her partner fled.

Observations.

If I mistake not the planetary influences, by the configurations to be observed this month, divers turns in mundane affairs may be expected.

Many negociations about, and much frustration of pacific designs.

Some foreign potentates seem involved in difficulties, and much confusion is abroad: Scandalous pamphlets appear to spread too fast; and I wish licentiousness, under the mask of liberty, may not be one part of the characteristic of too many of our own countrymen.

I believe this month will end in conjecture, confus'd intelligences, false conclusions, and indeterminations.

August hath xxxi Days.

The mist of ignorance to dissipate,
Learning to us has op'd her ample store;
And shewn us how ev'n worlds preponderate,
And old scholastic jargon is no more.
The qualities occult have ta'en their flight,
And naked truth has giv'n a system right.

Obſervations.

If a multiplicity of aſpects beſpeak a multiplicity of buſineſs in this mundane ſyſtem; if the different configurations of the heavenly bodies, beſpeak a great variety of buſineſs, and much confuſion in this our terreſtial habitation; this month affords but too much matter of ſpeculation.

If ſquares and oppoſitions are baleful omens; the world has no good proſpect before it; and he muſt be a bold man who will pretend to draw a certain determination from the ſtrange variety here before us.

Suffice it to ſay, that the malign omens are more than enough.

SEPTEMBER hath xxx Days.

From this bleſs'd iſle now ignorance is fled,
Philoſophy has rais'd fair truth on high:
And here the arts with genius at their head
Flouriſh, increaſe, and even multiply;
Joyous to make Britannia the ſeat
Of all that's valuable, good, and great.

For Britain's hardy offſpring brave and free:
See navigation ſkim the rapid flood,
From ev'ry foreign land, or diſtant ſea;
While ſhe the wide world's treaſure hither brings,
And in Britannia's lap their produce flings.

Yet the benign aſpects, in this month at leaſt, counterbalance the malignant ones; and the advanced age of the year ſeems to indicate, that whatever miſchiefs are remaining, muſt be rather in contemplation than practice. Some damages, both by land and ſea, may probably be heard of at this time. If, likewiſe, we have ſome further ſchiſms and diſputes upon the affairs, which, as they are ſpiritual, appear to concern every body, but as they are beyond every ones fair comprehenſion, concern no body at all, ſeem at this time to be full ripe.

1							16 14	5m12	10a24	The face of the heavens methinks appears rather to clear up in this month; and notwithstanding an opposition of ♃ and ☿, and two ill-boding squares, in both which Saturn is concern'd, and at this time retrograde to any good purpose, yet we have some benign trines, not to mention an affable sextile or two, all of friendly purport, which appear to counteract, or at least much alleviate the otherwise impending dangers.

Of the ECLIPSES that will happen in the Year 1787.

DURING the revolutions of the greater and leſſer lights, the grand ruler of the day, and the ſerene chearer of the nocturnal hours, within the circuit of the preſent year, there will be ſix Eclipſes; viz. three of the Sun, and three of the Moon, which will happen as follows:

The firſt will be a total Eclipſe of the Moon, and will happen on Wedneſday, January 3, vide infra. ☽ in ♋.

Beginning - - - - 10h. 0m. afternoon.
Total darkneſs begins 10h. 58m.
Middle - - - - 11h. 47m.
Total darkneſs ends - 0h. 37m. morn, Jan. 4.
End of the Eclipſe - 1h. 35m.

Dig. eclipſed 20° 56′ from the north ſide of the ☋'s ſhadow.

The ſecond will be an Eclipſe of the Sun, viſible though ſmall, and will happen on Friday, Jan. 19, as under, ☽ in ♒.

Beginning - 9h. 54m. morn.
Middle - - 10h. 33m.
End - - - 11h. 12m.

Dig. eclipſed 1° 17′ on ☉'s northern limb.

Obſerve, The ☽ makes her firſt impreſſion on the ſolar diſc at 42° from ☉'s vertex on the right hand.

The third is likewiſe an Eclipſe of the Sun, and viſible to the inhabitants of this iſle; it will happen on Friday, June 15, in the afternoon, ☽ in ♊.

Beginning - 4h. 11m.
Middle - - 4h. 56m.
End - - - 5h. 47m.

Dig. eclipſed 5° 24′ on ☉'s northern limb.

☽ makes the firſt impreſſion on the ſolar diſc. at 88° ½ from ☉'s vertex on the right hand.

The fourth will be an inviſible Eclipſe of the Moon, and will happen on Saturday, June 30, at mid-day; but as it will be a very remarkable one in ſeveral parts of the globe, I inſert the following. ☽ in ♑.

Beginning of the Eclipſe 0h. 43m. afternoon.
Total darkneſs begins - 1h. 59m.
Middle - - - - - 2h. 34m.
Total darkneſs ends - 3h. 10m.
Eclipſe ends - - - - 4h. 26m.

Dig. eclipſed 14° 27′ from north ſide of ☋'s ſhadow.

The fifth will be an Eclipse of the Sun, to us invisible, and will happen on Sunday, Dec. 9, as follows:

☌ at 4h 11m in long. 8s 17° 36′. ☽'s latitude 47′ ½ south. The Sun will be centrally eclipsed on the meridian at 4h. 20m. in longitude 65° west, and latitude 84° south.

The sixth and last Eclipse in the circuit of this year, will happen on Monday, Dec. 24; it will be a lunar one, and the latter end may be perceived in Great Britain as follows:

Beginning -	1h. 42m. afternoon.
Middle - -	3h. 7m.
☽ rises - -	3h. 52m.
End - - -	4h. 32m.

Dig. eclipsed 9° 18′ on the ☽'s northern limb.

Having given the times and quantities of each Eclipse, we shall in the next place humbly attempt at a modest judgment, from a scheme drawn and adapted to the time of the middle of the first Eclipse, viz. 11h. 47m. P. M. And here I find 7 deg. of Libra ascend, and 10 deg. of Cancer culminate. Sol and Venus are in the 4th house, Saturn in the 5th, Jupiter in the 8th, Luna eclipsed in the 10th, and Mars and Venus upon the 3d. The Moon suffers in her own house. I am sorry to say I expect some detriment to the female world; perhaps to the body by disease; perhaps to the mind by slander and foul report. The commonality appear affected with dropsical and other sluggish disorders, and their minds possessed with that kind of phrenzy which leads to commotions and internal broils; but ne Sutor ultra Crepidam. Politics have ever been a snare, even to the wisest; and yet the greatest fools have always been most apt to run their necks into it. Damages by water I much apprehend. When the hurricane arises,

"Mutinous waters hurry the war,
"And troops of waves come rolling from afar."

Expect likewise a worse winter than you wish for. This some may attribute to the season, others to the eclipse; all I shall say is, Nemo semper sapit. And if time belies my predictions, I shall be very glad of it.

IT is with the greatest satisfaction that I have received the approbation of several worthy correspondents, for my introduction of several anecdotes of the different creeds and and cuſtoms of thoſe who call themſelves diſciples of the adorable Captain of our Salvation. This, ſay they, gives youth an opportunity of knowing what otherwiſe, in the recluſe parts of the kingdom, and ſhut up from general ſociety, they moſt probably might never have the advantage of looking into; while at the ſame time it convinces them of the bleſſings they enjoy in a land of liberty and goſpel light, when compared with thoſe of our brethren diſperſed in different parts of the terraqueous globe, who ſtill groan under the rod of tyranny, or tremble at the menaces of prieſtcraft. Nor will it I hope be unentertaining to the ſenior part of my readers, to recall to their memories what in the juvenile part of their lives they themſelves have read with aſtoniſhment. I propoſe therefore, as far as my annual performance will permit, to purſue the thread of my diſcourſe; and will take my beginning where the firſt-born of the human race, and afterwards the firſt fruits of them that ſleep, took theirs.

ASIA, the ſubject of the earlieſt hiſtories, the incloſure of Paradiſe, and the land of patriarchs, prophets, and ancient heroes; where all the miracles recorded in the ſacred volumes of the Old and New Teſtament were performed; was the happy quarter where Chriſtianity firſt beamed with cœleſtial luſtre. Here Chriſtianity was firſt planted, and here in ſome meaſure ſhe yet holds her ſeat; but in what manner ſhall be the ſubject of the following diſcourſe, taken from the beſt authorities.

The Armenians have two patriarchs, many archbiſhops, biſhops, and prieſts of different orders; ſome of which lead monaſtic lives, and are of the order of St. Baſil. The Monk's way of living is very auſtere and mortified; and the whole people at leaſt one half of the year, abſtain from animal food and fiſh, refraining likewiſe, on every day ſet apart for a faſt, from all ſuſtenance until the evening, and then only indulge themſelves with bread, roots or herbs. Nor even is ſickneſs a ſufficient plea for a diſpenſation, and inſtances have been known where the ſick have refuſed nouriſhment to the abſolute loſs of their lives. Great Being! with what a madneſs have the prieſts inſpired thy votaries, to make them ungratefully refuſe the gracious bounties thy hand kindly ſtretcheth forth to the children of mortality; to deny by mortification the continuance of that that life thou haſt entruſted to their care, and make even ſuicide an act of devotion.

In reſpect to the laſt ſupper they are conformable to the Greek church; they adminiſter in both kinds, but dip the bread in the wine; and to this communion children of two or three years old are admitted. The ſolemn feſtival of Lent, wherein faſting and prayer is particularly recommended by the church, and the paſſion week, have a form appropriated for every day; and the holy ſacrament held forth on that of the crucifixion to all who repent them truly of their former ſins, ſteadfaſtly purpoſing to lead a new life, and have a lively faith in God's mercy through the merits of the Redeemer, is a practice ancient and laudable. But here matters rather differ; for during Lent they do not celebrate the Lord's ſupper at all; nor does the prieſt ſay maſs in public, but in a part of the church divided by a curtain for that purpoſe, where he repeats all the ſervice in a low voice, except the goſpel and creed which he repeats aloud.

The floors of their churches are covered with carpets, as the Armenians never enter with their ſhoes on; this I apprehend is in alluſion to the mandate given by God to Moſes, viz. Pull thy ſhoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou ſtandeſt is holy ground. — Their ceremonies of baptiſm, marriage, and burial, I purpoſely omit, and proceed to ſome of their particular tenets.

They deny the diviſion of the divine and human nature in the perſon of Chriſt; aſſerting they are united as the ſoul and body of man.

They believe that the ſouls of the righteous after death will remain in a ſtate of reſt till the general judgment, without any other ſatisfaction than that which ariſes from a conſciouſneſs of a paſt life of virtue. We ſhould from hence imagine that they ſuppoſe therefore the ſouls of the wicked would remain with only a horror for their paſt vices, till the great day of retribution, but herein is our miſtake; for they believe the ſouls of wicked men after their ſeparation from the body go immediately down to hell.

Several ſtrange traditions are by them held as articles of faith; of which take the following:

They believe that during the pregnancy of the Virgin Mary, her ſiſter Salome charged her with incontinency; and

and the Virgin desiring her to lay her hand upon her belly, a flame of fire issued from it and consumed great part of her arm, but upon a second application it was immediately restored.

They also affirm, that Judas, after he had betrayed his Lord and Master, resolved to hang himself before our Saviour's crucifixion; and conceived great hopes that he should escape the punishment he so richly deserved, by being in hell at our Saviour's descension, who he believed would set free all the souls he should find there; but the devil, as knowing as Judas, held the scoundrel by the heel till Christ had visited the dreary mansion, and then let the rogue drop in once for all.

Proceed we next to the province of Georgia, a place of considerable extent, bounded by Circassia on the north, by Dagheſtan Tartary on the east, by Turcomania on the south, and by the Black Sea on the west; part subject to the Turks, and part to the Persians.

The prevailing religion of Georgia is undoubtedly the Christian, which the prince of the country is said to profess. But all we at present can say is, that they build their churches in remote places, and on the summit of high hills and mountains, as it were to be out of the way; that they have bells in them to call their congregations together, while they modestly content themselves with viewing them at a humble distance.

It is further observable, that here the clergy maintain themselves not by the living but by the dead; for at the death of a Georgian, the bishop demands one hundred crowns for performing the funeral rites; which exorbitant demand must be satisfied, although the wife and children should be sold to discharge it, which is too often the case. But the fee being received, he very generously lays a letter on the breast of the deceased, requiring St. Peter to admit his soul to the mansions of eternal bliss:

Mingrelia, which was anciently called Colchis, is bounded on the east by mount Caucasus, and the kingdom of Imaretta, on the south by part of the province of Georgia, on the west by the Black Sea, and on the north by Circassia.

The Mingrelians, though they profess Christianity, maintain the lawfulness of having a number of wives, on principles of interest; and assert that a numerous offspring is

is a bleſſing, becauſe the ſale of their children furniſhes them with articles both of convenience and luxury. But if their progeny increaſes beyond their ſale, they murder the young brood without remorſe. With as little ceremony do they diſpatch the aged, and the ſick, when they are ſuppoſed to be paſt recovery.

The Mingrelians maintain that the Apoſtle Andrew preached the goſpel here; and there is ſtill a cathedral built of ſtone, and adorned with croſſes and images enriched with jewels. However, when or where they received the light of the goſpel, little boots it at this time, being now totally darkened in ignorance, irreverence, ſuperſtition, and bigottry. Their chief prieſt, called Catholicos, raiſes money by the ſale of the children of the wretched dependents, and by viſitations of the dioceſes in his juriſdiction; charging ſix hundred crowns for the conſecration of a biſhop, and one hundred crowns for ſaying maſs at the ordination of a common prieſt. Theſe in their turn plunder the people committed to their care by oppreſſion; ſelling their wives and children to ſlavery, and practiſing all kinds of wickedneſs, while at the ſame time they are ſo horribly ignorant, that they can ſcarce perform the offices of the church, nor do they attempt to preach or inſtruct the people; but abſtaining from fleſh with great perſeverance, ſeem to include all the exerciſes of religion in that ſingle article. Laſtly, their prayers are addreſſed to the ſupreme Being through the medium of the images and idols of their own making, by whoſe intereſt with the Supreme Arbiter of all, they hope to obtain bleſſings for themſelves, and diſtreſs, ruin, and damnation for thoſe with whom they are at variance.

But as this preſent performance will admit no further upon this ſubject, I ſhall conclude with that excellent deſcription of a depraved clergy, given by Milton in his beautiful Monody called Lycidas, where he well deſcribes them in the following lines:

Blind mouths, that ſcarce themſelves know how to hold
A ſheep-hook, or have learnt ought elſe the leaſt
That to the faithful herdſman's art belongs;
What recks it them? What need they? They are ſped;
And when they liſt, their lean and flaſhy ſongs
Grate on their ſcrannel pipes of wretched ſtraw;

The

The hungry sheep look up, and are not fed,
But swol'n with wind, and the rank mist they draw,
Rot inwardly, and foul contagion spread;
Besides what the grim wolf with privy paw
Daily devours apace, and nothing said,
But that two handed engine at the door
Stands ready to smite once, and smite no more.

Proceed we now to some contemplations upon the seasons; and first,

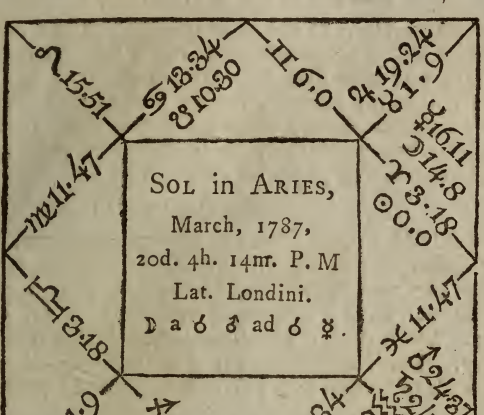
OF THE WINTER QUARTER.

THIS quarter begins on the 21st day of December, at half past two in the afternoon, the Sun then touching upon the first scruple of Capricorn, making our longest nights and shortest days; and continues till the 20th of March, when entering upon the equinoctial once more he reduces day and night to an equality. In examining the scheme for this quarter I find 10 deg. of ærial Twins to ascend, and 6 deg. of Aquarius upon the medium cœli; the regal Jupiter is retrograde in Taurus, as likewise are both Mercury and Venus in Capricorn. I apprehend more debates than resolutions in the councils of state; and this is the season for laying plans, rather than putting them in execution. Many designs will be upon the carpet, much canvassing, and no small share of frustration. We may hear too of complaints made, and redress promised; but when the grievances are to be relieved I do not find that the stars have yet determined. If among the nations England has its share of business upon its hands, it is not to be wondered at; if no more than its share, it is not to be repined at. May the great ruler of this realm have the heartfelt satisfaction to find that his senators are endowed with wisdom, honesty, and resolution, and the great council of the nation with loyalty, integrity, and unanimity.

OF THE SPRING QUARTER.

THE vernal or spring quarter commences on Tuesday, March 20, about a quarter past 4 in the afternoon, when he climbing again toward the northern regions, once more reaches the verge of Aries. The face of the heavens appears at this time as follows:

SOL



He who placed them for signs had no sooner appointed them their proper course, but they began their business. Whatever the Father of the human race by intuitive knowledge understood of these things, I pretend not to determine. This I know, that the experience of above five thousand years has handed it down to us, from Adam to Noah, and from him to the present day; nor is there nation or language where their voice has not been heard among them; but the reason that so few votaries to this science are known, is this: He sits him down in silence, and despising sound without sense, laughs at the folly of the present age, and enjoys the solid satifaction of viewing both what is past and what is to come. As few words to such an one will suffice, they will see that the heavens do not appear with the most promising face; that 6 deg. of Gemini are on the medium cœli, while 11 deg. 47 min. of Virgo are ascending; Saturn in the 6th house, which is an infortune, is of himself strong, having both a habitation and triplicity in Aquarius; he is not only powerful, but whoever examines the aspects in the ephemeris, will find him more busy than could be wished. In the affairs of nations however, methinks he is impartial, and deals out his ill-nature ill-nature as freely to one as to another. Rome and its adherents will experience some of its effects, but the God of Truth will defend the Protestant cause. Let age prepare for a happy eternity, for the present year promises them but little. Saturn keeps his dignities and is predominant to the year's end; so as little need be said, and this the concluding page, we hasten to

THE SUMMER QUARTER.

WHICH begins June 21, 2h. 6m. afternoon. The Sun then entering the first scruple of Cancer, when 30 deg. of Cancer culminate, and 22 deg. 38 min. of Libra ascend. Saturn now runs retrograde to any good I doubt. Much news is expected, little comes that is satisfactory. This I apprehend not to be the year when our swords are to be beat into ploughshares. But I proceed to

THE AUTUMNAL QUARTER.

THIS quarter commences Sept. 23, at about three quarters past three in the morning, the Sun then once more balancing day with night. Whoever forms a true scheme of the heavens for this ingress, will find 29 deg. of Taurus in M. C. and 6 deg. 39 min. of Virgo ascend, and Saturn still retrograde. Little more need be said, damages by land and by sea will certainly happen. Many things expected will come to pass, and if some things unexpected betide not the world, I err in my judgment. The aspects at the close of the year are not, I must own, of the most favourable disposition; I however hope no heavy clouds of calamity hang over our British Isles. We, thank heaven, are not reduced to David's choice; nor the sword, the pestilence, or famine rages through the land. Let but a sense of benefits received inspire our hearts with gratitude to our kind Benefactor, and a consciousness of our mutual dependance upon each, unite us together in love and unanimity; and we may depend upon the protection of that divine Being whose eyes are over all his works; who is the God of truth, and the protector of the Protestant cause.
